EDITOR'S DESK.

THE games between the English High School and our own school are beginning to be the principal events in the athletic contests of the interscholastic association, and are as exciting to the Latin School boy as the Harvard-Yale games are to the members of the colleges. We have had occasion once this year to exult over our defeat of the High School, and it is only fair that the latter should take its turn now. We were squarely defeated on June 11 by the occupants of the other half of our school building, and have nothing to complain of. But we must be excused for saying rather proudly, that it was the first time it has been done since the organization of the base-ball association. Our own team was not at fault for the defeat; nor were the members of the school lacking in numbers and enthusiasm; and, above all, the German band was not to blame. It was the High School's turn, and they took it. As we go to press, the winner of the tie between Cambridge and the E. H. S. is not decided. Whichever it may chance to be, we congratulate them on their success.

WE had hoped to print a special message from the Harvard Latin School Association with reference to accommodations for those who are to take the examinations at Cambridge. Since we have not received any communication as yet, we simply announce that Rooms No. 22 and 23 Grays and No. 11 Hollis will be open to the members of the first and second classes during the examinations. The dates and hours of the examinations are as follows:

THURSDAY, JUNE 30.

8 A. M. Applicants meet the officer in charge of examinations.

9-11. Elementary Latin.

11½-1½. Elementary Greek.

2½-3½. Latin Composition.

4-6. Advanced Latin.

FRIDAY, JULY 1.

8-9. Elementary Physics. (Laboratory examinations will be provided for at other times.)

9-10. Plane Geometry.

10½-11½. Algebra.

11½-12½. History.

1-2½. English.

3-4. Greek Composition.

4-6. Advanced Greek.

SATURDAY, JULY 2.

1½-2½. Elementary French.

It is customary at this period of the year to take a retrospective glance at the events of the year; but we have always aimed to be original, and this year we positively decline to take any backward glances, inasmuch as we have adopted as our motto the words of our seventy-year old Latin School graduate, "Look forward and not back." We trust that no one will be so unkind as to insinuate that we have nothing creditable to look back upon, for if any class ever had reason to be proud of its accomplishments, surely '92 has.

What is it, then, to which we are looking forward so eagerly? Our school stands as high as any other school in the country for educational excellence, but it is sadly deficient in one branch which is receiving attention from all educators. We refer to physical training. Doubtless every one is tired of hearing the Latin School abused for its utter indifference to athletics, but no one is more tired of hearing it abused than we are of abusing it. The great millennial period to which we are looking forward is the time when the school, notwithstanding its unfavorable location, will have all the modern advantages for physical training; when a grateful company of alumni will have furnished it with the means for a campus, for a gymnasium under a competent instructor, for a permanent fund upon which the school can draw for the maintenance of its foot-ball, base-ball, and athletic teams. When this glorious period of time arrives, we shall get more than one point in the games of the Athletic Association.

WE wish, in closing our journalistic careers, to thank our contributors for their kindness and to wish all future volumes of the REGISTER even greater success and prosperity than the eleventh volume has experienced.

THE EDITORS.

OUT-DOOR GAMES OF THE I. A. A.

The annual out-door contest of the Inter-scholastic Athletic Association was held on Holmes' Field, Cambridge, June 10. The meeting was an eminently successful one, notwithstanding the strong wind, and four new records were made. A. B. Holmes, of Hopkinson, beat the record in the mile bicycle race by seven seconds; Hoyt, of Roxbury Latin, beat the record for the pole vault by one-half inch; Mahoney, of English High, beat his own record for the shot-put by two feet eight and one-half inches; and J. F. Driscoll, who has won considerable fame by his athletic work at the Brookline High School, beat the record for the hammer-throw by three feet. Driscoll was protested in the broad jump because he had entered after the entries were closed; as he secured first place in this event, a decision against him will change the result.

Hopkinson, with its wealth and facilities for training, easily secured the first place, while, in direct contrast, the B. L. S. made a rather poor showing. Cuniff, however, won a point for us in the 880-yards run.

The complete summary is as follows:

100-Yards Dash.

BALDER.

[DERBY PRIZE, JUNE, 1892.]

Through the halls of Valhalla the golden,
In Asgard, the realm of the sky,
Through the beautiful Palace of Odin
There was feasting with revelry high.
The clash of the beakers was blending,
Loud rattled the trenchers of wood,
And the shout of the heroes ascending
Was ever "Hail, Balder the Good!"

"Hail, Balder the bright one of Asgard!
In the sunshine that follows thee strong,
The love of all things is thy safeguard,
There's nothing that wishes thee wrong.
With Spring the all-father hath decked thee,
All nature awoke at thy birth,
The giants of Utgard protect thee,
And sagas extol thee on earth."

Then up sprang the god of the thunder,
The lightning-eyed hammerer, Thor,
Whose bolts burst Jotunheim asunder,
Who rides on the whirlwinds of war.
"Hark, sons of Valhalla, immortal!"
The high rafters shook at his word,
And Heimdall afar at the portal
The mighty-voiced thunderer heard.

"Since to Frigga, our beautiful mother,
All creatures in earth and in sky
Have promised to guard our dear brother,
Lest Balder the beautiful die,
Let us try if these stones without voices,
These arms that un pitying slay,
Love the god that the summer rejoices,
And from him will turn harmless away."

Well pleased were the gods, and when morning
Had scattered the shadows of night,
To Ida's broad plain they were thronging,
Where daily they gathered for fight.
Then each poised a spear or boulder,
And hurled it at Balder's bright head,
But all passed by his side or his shoulder,
And on in their courses they sped.

But apart, like a storm cloud dark lowering
More black in the splendor of day,
The evil-eyed Loki stood glowering,
Beholding the gods at their play.
Their joy moved his black heart to sadness,
Bright Balder he cursed with his eye,
His envy and hate rose to madness,
He vowed that the Spring-god should die.

His mind was resolved, and fast speeding
To Fensal he hastened his way,
Where the beautiful Frigga was heeding
The work of her maidens that day.
On her distaff of gold she was spinning,
The shining wheel whirled in its flight,
While flowing-haired Fulla sat singing
Of Thor and his wonderful night.

Then Loki, the black-souled deceiver,
Assuming the form of a maid,
Went into the presence of Frigga,
Who paused in her spinning and said:
"Fair maid, with the sons of Valhalla
How fares it? Has Odin, my lord,
In combat showed proof of his valor
Since we feasted of late at his board?"

"Not so, queen, the heroes are showing
How all things love Balder the fair,
Though their weapons at him they are throwing
They touch not his glittering hair.
Is it true that all things whatsoever
In earth and in air and in sea
Have sworn to guard Balder forever,
And keep him in safety for thee?"

Then answered dame Frigga, delighted
That honor was shown to her son:
"Fair maiden, the faith has been plighted
Of all things created save one.
The poor little mistletoe growing
Far up on the oak's spreading bough,
Its pale leaves so mournfully showing,
Is surely too young for a vow."

Then Loki went out of the palace,
And swift as a shadow he flew,
Intent on his errand of malice,
To the oak where the mistletoe grew.
From the boughs dark with shadows he tore it,
An arrow he made of the wood,
Then back to the Ida plain bore it,
Where Hoder, the Winter-god, stood.

Alone stood the Winter-god sadly,
On his hair the great snowflakes lay white,
In the sports of the heroes he gladly
Had joined, but the darkness of night
Sat fast on his eyelids forever.
"Sad brother," said Loki, "now show
Your love for dear Balder: endeavor
To shoot as I level your bow."

Swift, swift flew the arrow ill-fated,
Nor swerved from its pitiless way,
Nor its speed, nor its sharpness abated,
But pierced the bright lord of the day.
Woe, woe to the sons of Valhalla!
From caverns deep under the earth
The legions of darkness and pallor
Rushed forth in a terrible birth!

On the mighty ship "Ring-horn" they laid him,
 And slew, and placed close by his side,
 The black steed which loved and obeyed him,
 That to Death's dark abode he might ride.
 Then they launched the proud ship, and a fire-brand
 Was cast on the glittering heap;
 Red flashed the steep cliffs of the mainland
 Till "Ring-horn" went down in the deep.

Through the halls of Valhalla the golden,
 In Asgard, the realm of the sky,
 Through the beautiful palace of Odin,
 All hushed were the shout and the cry.
 The winds through the dark halls were sighing,
 The song and the wassail were fled,
 The joys of Valhalla were dying,
 For Balder, the sunshine, was dead.

NOTES.

WE neglected to state in last month's issue that Gallivan, '89, and Gillespie, '88, were participants in the contest for the Boylston prizes.

MR. JACKSON gave the opening lecture in the Bemis lectureship course at the town hall in Lincoln, Mass., June 8th. His subject was, "A Lecture About Lectures."

WE have always had a pretty good opinion of our school supervisors, and our good opinion has been greatly strengthened during the last month. Only the most kind-hearted men could have given us such examinations from June 7-14 inclusive. O that the Harvard examiners would be as merciful!

AFTER one failure the First Class succeeded in getting an excellent class picture on June 10th. If any of the school are so much delighted with our personal appearance as to want one of the pictures, they can obtain one for only $1.50. One member of the class has already been informed that he looks like Apollo Belvidere, so it will be well worth the money to pay such a reasonable price for such a picture.

WE hereby warn every one not to copy our new and unauthorized spelling of Virgil's great Epic. It appeared in last month's issue as the Aenead. We comfort ourselves with the reflection that "even the most diligent proof-reader makes mistakes."

As far as we have been able to ascertain, the following are the future destinations of the famous class of '92. Most of us seem to be intending to pursue our education still further, but we think that it is an unusual thing for a graduating class to differ so in its choice of colleges:

Andrew, Bearse, Bigelow, Brown, Dow, Farrar, Fiske, Gibson, Gould, Greene, Hewins, Johnson, Katzmann, Knight, O'Malley, Parker, Prescott, Russell, Slattery, Starr, Townsend, Viaux, Warren, and Wood will go to Harvard.

Adams, G. C. Hollister, J. C. Hollister, and Twombly will go to Yale.

Blakemore, Storrs, and Tower will go to Amherst; Small will go to Princeton; Carney and Farrell will go to Boston College; Evans will go to Boston University; Williams will go into business; Freedman will go to the Institute of Technology.

And we're all jolly good fellows.

THERE is one organization concerning which not enough has been said during the year; we refer to the Universal Peace Society. The fact that not much has been said about the society is due to the exceedingly quiet and undemonstrative way in which all the proceedings of the members are carried on. A meeting has been held recently, however, and this we have been able to attend and report.

The first and last meeting was held June 1st in that large and well-furnished room — so long devoted to the pursuit of scientific lore — known as Room 18. The meeting was attended by the entire membership of thirteen, and was called to order by Brother Bearse. Immediately afterwards Brother Katzmann arose and offered the following resolution: Resolved, That it is with sincere regret that we announce to the world that we were unable at first to prevail upon our brethren of the class of '92 to lay aside their martial equipments; but that it is with heartfelt joy that we proclaim that they have at last put aside their weapons, and, wearied with the wounds of war, are drawing out pensions as fast as possible in order to pay for their class pins, declamation programmes, Washington's Birthday celebration, dance committee deficit, class photographs, drill expenses, Tremont Temple exercises, class dinner, base-ball and foot-ball clubs, tennis club, athletic club, and unintentional damage done to a chair in the Exhibition Hall. Brother Katzmänn was asked to describe the wounds of our brothers, that we might have further proof of the horrors of war, but he stated that he could not do it, and recommended that we should study the fifth book of Homer's Iliad for such information.

This resolution was then adopted by a rising vote, and Brother Prescott forthwith offered to print the resolution in the REGISTER for 50 cents an inch (inside space, 75 cents). The meeting was then declared adjourned sine bello. The officers of this association are as follows: C. G. Bearse, Supreme Thumper of the Gavel; F. G. Katzmänn, Supreme Jangler of the Money Box; Gunides, Supreme Wiggler of the Goose Quill. Sumus populi neque milites.

THE kindness of the Harvard Latin School Association in opening several rooms for those who take their examinations at Cambridge is not, perhaps, so much appreciated by the members of the second class as by those of '92. We found the rooms last year to be an absolute necessity, and we have no idea what we should have done without them.

THE cover is "done up brown" this month.

MR. F— (explaining to pupil the use of the Greek dative of advantage): "The preposition for in English does not always express advantage or disadvantage. For instance, if you say, 'I started for New York,' it is not necessarily for the advantage of New York that you have started for it."

PRINTED instructions with regard to the examinations will be distributed amongst the members of the first and second classes by the Harvard Latin School Association. The notice of this was received after the editorial was printed.

WE are glad to print as the last item of news for the month and the year the presentation of six special prizes for exemplary conduct and fidelity, to members of the graduating class during their course. The presentation was accompanied by a short speech from Dr. Merrill, commending the general worthiness, both in scholarship and in character, of the class of '92. The six worthy recipients were James D. Small, Victor Viaux, Thomas H. Russell, George C. Hollister and David Townsend. We believe that such commendation is unprecedented in the school's history.

THE PRIZE DRILLS.

The prize drills were looked forward to this year with even more eagerness than ever, because they were the first to be held under the new tactics, and it was thought that they would afford an illustration of the practical workings of the new "Drill Regulations."

The third battalion exceeded its usual high standard of excellence, and the men of the different companies deserve great credit for the interest they took in the drill during the year, for this enabled them to be, in the language of one of the judges, "the best drilled companies seen this year."

This year our drill came second in the list, being preceded by that of the second battalion and followed by those of the first and fourth battalions. We were disappointed at not being last, as the catalogue had informed us we were to be, but the boys seemed to put new life into their drill because of the shortening of the time.

Any one coming into Room 12 in recitation time during the few days just preceding the eventful Wednesday must easily have known that something was the matter, by the unusually large number of failures. Had he happened in there afterward, he would have thought himself at a funeral, such an unwonted quiet prevailed in some parts.

Whatever fears were entertained about the weather were quickly dispelled by the appearance of the sun, and all rejoiced that the day was to be fair. The battalion, acting under general orders from the committee on High schools, assembled in the drill hall and marched in good order to the Mechanics Building. The exercises, as usual, began with a short, but very good battalion drill, under command of Major Twombly. After this, companies D, C, B, and F came on the floor in the order named. After the sword squad and drum corps exhibitions came companies A, H, G, and E. After the company drill the individual squad occupied the time until the bayonet squad appeared. The members of this gave a very creditable exhibition, pronounced by many the best in the regiment, and the length of some of the commands caused a number of people to wonder if they were "made by the yard and cut off to suit." Following the bayonet squad was the dress parade and award of prizes. The large hall was so still that one could almost hear a pin drop, until Dr. Green announced that Co. G had won first prize; then one could scarcely "hear himself think." The din was kept up during the award of second prize to Co. A, special prize to Co. H, and first and second individual prizes to Sergeant Bogan and Sergeant Warren respectively. The bayonet squad prizes, awarded a few days before, were then announced. Sergeant Sears won first prize and Sergeant McElwain second. After the dress parade the battalion proceeded to its armory, and was there dismissed. The march home was a decided improvement over those of former years, and we hope each boy will make it a personal matter to see to it that in future, the battalions march home as well as did that of '92.

Taken altogether, the prize drill was an excellent exhibition, and considering the disadvantages under which the battalion has labored, by far the best we have ever had. Let every one try hereafter to improve on the high standard set this year.

The second, or Highland battalion, had its annual drill on Tuesday, May 24th. Both double-rank prizes were captured by Roxbury companies, while first and second single-rank prizes went to East Boston, Brighton taking third. Corporal Walsh, Mr. Walsh's son, took the first individual prize.

The first battalion's drill was on Thursday, May 26th, and that of the fourth battalion on the next day. In the first battalion, Company B was awarded first prize, Company H, second, and Company G, third. In the fourth battalion, first prize went to Company C, second to Company D, and special to Company H, so that Company H in each battalion took a prize.

A FOREST VISION.

[PRIZE ENGLISH POEM, JUNE, 1892.]

When fair young June in raiment bright
Forsakes the side of dying May,
And with her wand of flowers wild
Ascends her throne, the season's child;
When lost are thoughts of winter's night
In happiness for summer's day,

Then, school-days closed, I leave my books,—
My wearied brain now longs for rest,—
And quickly seek the country air,
The farm-house quaint, its homely fare,
The forest with its streams and nooks,
The winding paths to mountain's crest.

One morning bright, thus wand'ring far
I chanced upon a shaded dell,
Which, nourished by a silv'ry stream
That sped along like fancy's dream,
Enclosed by woods, had none to mar
The haunt so wild where nymph might dwell.

Reclining on the mossy bank
I soon was lost in revery,
While through the dale the morning breeze
So gently sighed o'er fell and leas,
And, bending over, deep I drank
The water as it glided by.

Refreshed I started to retrace
The path that wound throughout the wood,
When suddenly, from out the shade
The forest foliage had made,
A maiden fair in form and face
Before my startled vision stood;

Her eyes were dark with spirit bright
That at her will my heart did hold,
Her locks were fair and unconfined,
The sportive pleasure of the wind,
Her dainty robe so snowy white,
Adorned her form in graceful fold.

An instant pausing on the way
She looked at me with wond'ring glance;
Her parted lips with beauty's smile
Disclosed her matchless teeth with guile;
She seemed the queen of storied fays,
Returning home from early dance.

Then brushing past me, standing there
As spell-bound by a witch's art,
She onward stealing through the glade

Into the distance then did fade,
Leaving behind my aching heart
Filled with love for the maiden fair.

I rubbed my eyes and pondered there;
Surely it was a vision light,
Some fancy of my fevered brain,
An image of some classic strain,
Perhaps an ancient wood-nymph rare,
Strolling from far Olympus' height.

Upon the path where she did tread,
The sloping hill, the narrow dale,
A rose in bloom there softly lay,
The Dryad's gift to early day;
I raised it from the grassy bed,
The only proof of my strange tale.

Oft since then I've roamed abroad,
O'er woodland green and lake and fell,
And often, but in vain, I've tried
To find that dell and streamlet side,
The moss-grown bank, the even sward,
That fairy nymph, her magic spell.

THE PRIZE DECLAMATION.

The pouring rain on the morning of June 3 augured ill for a large audience at the Prize Declamation, but at just the right moment the sun came out and the afternoon was as pleasant as could be wished. This auspicious clearing of the weather recalled the famous lines of Virgil on a similar occasion, which might be imitated as follows, to suit the present case:

This declamation, like all its predecessors, has been pronounced the best that the Latin School has given "within the memory of the oldest inhabitant." There can be no doubt, however, that the special prizes which have been offered to the lower classes for the past three years have greatly increased the interest in declamation in those classes, and that the effect of this improvement is already being seen in the award of the regular prizes. Before this year it was an unheard of thing for a boy in the third class to take one of the five regular prizes; yet this time both the third prizes went to that class. Certainly we are all glad that declamation is improving in the school. A little record-breaking in this line is as desirable as it is in athletics.

While the declamation marks were being added up, Dr. Merrill read the award of prizes for the school year ending May 31, 1892, as follows:

For Excellence in Classics—Henry W. Prescott, Ernest E. Sonthard, Charles T. Rawson, Paul A. H. van Daell, Carl N. Jackson, Donald F. Urquhart, Joseph G. O'Malley, Leo F. O'Neil, Durant F. Drake, Walter G. Burns, William J. Kelly, Frederick M. Crowe, William W. Bellamy.

For Excellence in Modern Studies—John C. Adams, Rufus B. Sprague, Lester E. Herriek, John E. Lansing, Lawrence H. Parkhurst, Arthur E. Greene, George P. Morey, Frank B. Newton, Lawrence W. Pierce, Charles W. English, Thomas Ordway, D. Brainerd Spooner, Frank J. Kneeland.

For Excellence in Reading—Joseph P. Warren, first prize; Michael F. Carney, William B. Williams, second prizes; Reginald H. E. Starr, Waldo Farrar, third prizes.

For Exemplary Conduct and Punctuality—John C. Adams, Henry W. Prescott, Charles L. Storrs, Henry F. Knight, Louis A. Freedman, Joseph P. Warren, Carl N. Jackson, Thomas Ordway, Lawrence H. Parkhurst, Burt Tower, Donald F. Urphart, Durant F. Drake, John E. Lansing, Frederick M. Crowe, Henry W. Bail, Arthur E. Greene, Frank J. Kneeland, D. Brainerd Spooner, William Edmunds, William J. Kelly, Lawrence W. Pierce.

For Exemplary Conduct and Fidelity—Edward J. Brown, John R. Healy, Archie C. Holway, Frank B. Granger, John W. Edmunds, Amos Catterm, Walter M. Flint, Fred W. Dahl, Henry W. Flagg, Edward Johnson, Frederick C. Lee, Ralph N. Burbank, Edward S. King.

For Original Written Exercises—English poem, Michael F. Carney; English essay (second prize), Ernest E. Southard; poetical translation from Horace (second prize), Joseph P. Warren.

Gardner Prize for English essays on The Glacial Period in North America—divided between Henry W. Prescott and Joseph P. Warren.

Derby Prize, a gold medal, for English poem—Joseph P. Warren.

After the award of prizes the band, accompanied vocally by the first class, played "Fair Harvard," till Dr. C. M. Green was introduced to award the declamation prizes. Dr. Green spoke a few words to prove the superiority of public over private schools. The latter, he said, are useful as intellectual hospitals, but for the boy of average ability the public school is the place to learn self-reliance and to get a good start towards making himself a successful man and a useful citizen.

Dr. Green then announced the declamation prizes as follows: First prize, Clarence G. Bearse; second prizes, Michael F. Carney and William B. Williams; third prizes, M. Sumner Coggan and Samuel Robinson; special prizes, Guy A. Ham and Frank J. Kneeland.

The following gentlemen acted as judges at the declamation:

Hon. C. T. Gallagher, President of the School Board. Dr. C. M. Green, Chairman of the Committee on Military Drill. Mr. Simon Davis and Mr. B. B. Whittemore, members of the Committee on Latin and High Schools. Mr. Samuel B. Capen, member of the School Board and Chairman of important committees, notably the Committee on School Houses. Rev. Henry F. Jenks, Editor of the Latin School Catalogue from the foundation of the School in 1635 to 1885. The school is under deep obligation to this gentleman for promoting its interests and welfare in many ways. Dr. E. M. Hartwell, Director of Physical Exercise in the public schools of Boston. Col. J. M. Ellis, a Latin School graduate, who fought for the Union in the Civil War. His name is on the tablet in our corridor, one of the names of those whom the Latin School sent to the defence of their country. Mr. J. E. Thomas, teacher in the English High School. Rev. Ruben Kidner, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. Mr. W. T. Campbell, teacher in Adams Academy, Quincy, Mass. Rev. F. E. E. Hamilton, College Orator at the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of Harvard College, and also Class Day Orator the same year; a recent graduate of the Boston University Divinity School. Mr. E. B. Hunt, in the Public Library of Boston. Mr. S. F. McCleary, Jr., student in the Divinity School, Harvard University.

The last five named are graduates of our school who won prizes at the Prize Declamations. J. P. W.

BASE-BALL.

CAMBRIDGE, 3; B. L. S., 1.

We begin in this number to chronicle our defeats, and it is a sad history. But the fault seems not to rest on the ball team as on our unlucky destinies. The game with Cambridge occurred on Saturday, May 28, and was not very well attended by the B. L. S. Cambridge was in the field, and O'Malley, our first batter, reached first in safety. Rand then knocked a foul to the catcher. O'Malley was caught off first base, and Small, after making a base hit, was thrown out at second. For Cambridge, Tobey got his base on balls, and was advanced a base by Moore's base on balls. Clarkson knocked a fly to Small, and Whittemore made a base hit, sending in Tobey, but Moore was thrown out at the plate by Rand's fine throw. Close was then given a base on balls, but Stearns was put out at first on a hit to Small. In the next inning, Beale hit to the pitcher and was out a first. Rogers struck out. Twombly made a base hit, but was left on second by Slattery's being put out on first by Whittemore's sharp fielding. Goodridge made a hit to Rogers, and reached first, afterwards stealing second. Glidden hit a fly to Small. Roberts hit a fly to Small, and Tobey did the same. In the third inning, Lewis hit to second base but was out at first. Wilson was thrown out at first by Close, and O'Malley hit a fly to Roberts. Moore and Clarkson hit fouls to O'Malley, and Whittemore's hit was fielded by Beale to Slattery.

In the second half of the fourth, Close struck out. Stearns' hit was stopped by Rogers and the runner caught at first; Goodridge was given a base on balls, and Glidden hit to Wilson. For B. L. S., Rogers reached first on the error of the second baseman, but was caught by Close on second. Twombly hit to Moore. Slattery hit a fly to Stearns. For Cambridge, Roberts hit to Small, Tobey hit to Wilson, and Moore knoecked a fly to Small. In the sixth, Lewis hit a fly to Moore, Wilson was given a base on balls and stole second, O'Malley, strange to say, struck out, and Rand hit a fly to first base. Clarkson hit to Beale and was out at first, Whittemore and Close were out on fouls to Beale and O'Malley.

In the seventh, Small got a base on balls, but was caught off second; Beale hit safely to second base, but was caught in trying to steal. Rogers hit a foul to Close. For Cambridge, Stearns hit to Wilson, and Goodridge hit a fly to Lewis. Glidden's hit to Beale was well fielded and the runner was out at first. Our fellows now made a desperate effort. Twombly was given a base on balls, and took second on a passed ball. Slattery made a base hit, sending in Twombly. Lewis fouled out, and Wilson struck out. O'Malley and Rand made base hits, but O'Malley was declared out for interfering with Whittemore. Cambridge now took their turn. Roberts got a base on balls. Tobey hit safely to Rogers, advancing Roberts; Moore hit a fly to Lewis; Clarkson hit safely to Beale, sending in Roberts and Tobey. Whittemore struck out, and Close hit to Beale and was out at first. For B. L. S., Small made a base hit, but was out at second on Beale's hit to short-stop. In the course of the next few minutes, Rogers hit a fly to the centre-field, and Beale stole second. Twombly got a base on balls. Beale stole third. Slattery hit to Moore, and we were beaten.

The great event of the season came off June 11, and a German band and a big crowd succeeded only in increasing the heat of the day. O'Malley was first at the bat and hit over first base, stealing second. Rand struck out. Small made a sacrifice hit to second base, but Beale hit a foul to first base. McMillan struck out for E. H. S. Healey hit to Rogers and was out. Morrill got a base on balls, stole second, took third on Lee's hit, and came home on Mahoney's hit to Rand, who muffed the ball. Bullard made a base hit, which brought in Lee, but Mahoney was thrown out at home by Rand's fine throw. For B. L. S., Rogers hit a fly to the short-stop, Twombly made a base hit and took second on Ochs' error. Slaterry hit a fly to Healey and Katzmann, Lewis' substitute, hit to left field. In the last half, Selfridge hit a foul to Beale, Ochs fouled out to O'Malley, and Dakin hit to Small.

In the third, Wilson took a base on balls and stole second; O'Malley made a base hit, but was finally left on third by Rand's foul to Mahoney. Small's fly to Ochs. and Beale's strike-out; Wilson, however, reached home. In the second half McMillan struck out; Healey made a base hit and stole second. Morrill hit a foul to O'Malley. Lee struck out. Then Rogers hit a fly to Bullard, Twombly hit a foul to Morrill, and Slaterry was given a base on balls. Katzmann also took a base on balls, and Slaterry stole third. Wilson struck out. For E. H. S., Mahoney was given his base on balls and stole second. Bullard hit a fly to Katzmann. Selfridge brought Mahoney home by a hit to Beale, and Ochs brought Selfridge in on a base hit. Dakin hit to Wilson, and Ochs was out at second.

In the fifth, O'Malley made his usual base hit, stole second and third, and came home soon after. Rand struck out. Small hit to Dakin. Beale made a base hit, stole second, but was left on base by Rogers' foul to Mahoney. Score, 4-2. McMillan hit to Small, and Healey reached first on Rogers' error. Morris hit to Twombly, and Lee to Rand. In the sixth, Twombly was thrown out at first by Healey, Slaterry struck out, and Katzmann hit to Dakin. For E. H. S., Mahoney reached first on Beale's error, but was thrown out at second. Bullard made a base hit, but was thrown out in like manner at second. Selfridge hit to Rogers and was out at first.

In the seventh, we set to work. Wilson hit to Healey and was out at first. O'Malley made his base hit and stole second, reaching third on Mahoney's error. Rand made a base hit sending in O'Malley, stole second on a wild pitch, and reached third. He was thrown out at home, however. Small reached first on Morrill's error, stole second, and came home with Beale's help. Rogers hit to second base and was out. Score, 4-4. Ochs hit a foul to Beale. Dakin reached first on Katzmann's error and stole second. McMillan hit to Small. Healey hit to Rogers and was out. In the eighth, Twombly reached first on Bullard's error, but was thrown out at second. Slaterry struck out. Katzmann made a base hit. Wilson and O'Malley were given bases on balls, but Rand spoiled the fun by hitting a pop fly to Ochs. E. H. S. now began to hit the ball. Morrill reached first on Slaterry's error. Laurie, who was taking Lee's place, reached first on Slaterry's second error, advancing Morrill to second. Mahoney hit to Beale and was out at first. Bullard brought in Morrill and Laurie with a two-base hit, but was out at the plate. Selfridge made a base hit, and got home on Ochs' three-bagger and O'Malley's error. Dakin hit to Beale and was out. In the ninth, Small hit to Ochs, Beale struck out, and Rogers followed Beale's example.
